About the AVL - GeoIP Authentication

What is Geolocation?

Geolocation is the attempt to identify the real-world location of an object, such as a cell phone or an Internet-connected device.

The AVL uses this technology to help determine if a user is in the state of Alabama. If the user can be authenticated (using geolocation), then the user can access AVL resources. Otherwise, the user will need to log in with their AVL username/password.

How does this affect home access?

Using geolocation has made AVL home access much easier. Most users can access AVL resources within the state of Alabama without having to obtain an AVL card.

What about AVL Cards?

Most Alabama users are no longer required to have an AVL card for home access. If users travel or live out of state then they will need an AVL card to access AVL resources. Additionally, users that live near the state line and users who access the Internet via an air card, cell phone, iPad, satellite, or U-verse may not be automatically authenticated; these users will need to log in with their AVL Card.

How does it work?

If you're on the campus of an Alabama public school or library then you'll see this icon on the right side of the top navigation bar.

If you're recognized as being in the state of Alabama but off campus you'll see this icon on the right side of the top navigation bar.

If you're not GeoIP authenticated you'll see this icon on the right side of the top navigation bar.

Simply move your mouse over the icon and type in your username and password on your AVL card. If you enter a valid username and password the icon will change to this.
