Dothan, Ala.—The first annual Career and Technical Education Honors Recognition program was recently implemented at Wallace Community College. Dr. William Sellers, Coordinator of Career and Technical Education, saw the need to thank the employees in his division who go above and beyond what is expected each day. Using the “212 Degrees Series” as inspiration for one of the awards, Dr. Sellers stated, “At 211 degrees, water is hot but when it reaches 212 degrees the water is boiling and produces steam. At that point, many things happen. Many faculty members at WCC go the extra degree to make things happen in their respective departments to better serve their students, assist their colleagues, or bring a new idea to the division.”

Recipients of the “Extra Degree” award were Ken Hester, Paula Mims, Delmar Smith, Woodrow Farrington, Jason Owen, Milton Leddon, Garner Williams, Greg Odom, Ed Cox, Naser Kamleh, Tracy Brooks, and Jeff Cooper.

The second award, “The Blue Vase Degree,” recognizes faculty and staff members for their display of persistence, determination, passion, and sense of responsibility. The award is inspired by The Go-Getter, Bill Peck’s story of extra-ordinary determination to get a job despite his disability and his effort to go the extra mile in achieving each task his boss assigned. The story shows each of the qualities this award represents. Those receiving this award included Marcia Hudson, Lori Logan, John Waters, Tony Greene, and Joe Johnson.
